

Welcome to the Family University Trail!

How is energy gained from wind or sun?
Why are insects important for the environment?
What was the bicycle invented for and when?
And what is a university, or rather what does the University of Applied Sciences Emden/Leer have to do with all these aspects?

With the university trail you can explore the Emden campus of the University of Applied Sciences Emden/Leer with the whole family. It consists of 15 panels on various topics such as sustainability, equality and the university of applied sciences. An overview of all stations can be found on the map.

In addition to texts and images, you can also find a QR code on each panel, which you can scan with a smartphone, for example. The QR code will lead you to more information, ideas for participation and much more. Let yourself be surprised!

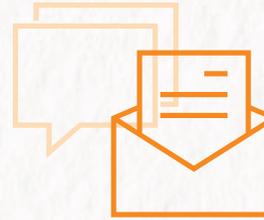

You are not on site?
That's no problem at all: The University Trail is also easily accessible from home. All you have to do is to visit the Family Service homepage.

Have fun!
